The city of Koper lies in the South-West Slovenia on the Adriatic coast, only 20 km South of Trieste, Italy and about 30 km North of Croatian border. Besides Koper, there are other three important towns along the Slovenian coast, Izola, Piran and Portorož.

Strunjan (Italian: Strugnano) is a settlement and bay stretching along the Slovenian coast between Izola and Piran. Formed in the valley of the river Roja, encompassing the salt pans and the nearby hills. This part of the coast was proclaimed a nature reserve in the 1990. On its small surface we can find the highest flysch cliffs, the longest portion of natural coast in the bay of Trieste, the only Slovenian marine lagoon, the smallest Mediterranean salt pans and a very well preserved cultural landscape. Strunjan successfully defies the excessive urbanization, which has spread to most of the Slovenian coast. The longest part of natural sea shore in Slovenia, protected as a nature park, is located between Strunjan and Izola.
